Creating Texture in Your Cuts by Michelle Harman

Second-generation texturizing goes well beyond layering. Today, stylists are adding mobility to hair by sliding, chipping, point-cutting and notching—And they're using a slew of tools to make those techniques unique. To help you create individualized cuts that will keep clients coming back, this course presents all the essentials of texturizing. The detailed techniques represent the collective intelligence of the craft. Divided into three parts, the course begins with a look at texturizing particular hair types. Part 2 provides step-by-step techniques for the looks of the moment, while Part 3 showcases specific texturizing tools and their uses.

The Art of Contrasting Harmony by Elmer Bilek

In the past, color was big, bold and chunky. Now it's natural, but interesting, with the face, not the color, as the main focus. It's all about using your artistic eye to capture the glamorous contours of form and shape, and uniting the design with bold strokes of color. Come learn more about the unique creative possibilities found in the individual placement of color accents.
